The Best and Worst of State Tax Administration

COST Scorecard on State Tax Appeals & Procedural Requirements

Executive Summary

The Council On State Taxation (COST) has long monitored and commented on state tax appeals processes and administrative practices. Part of that effort has resulted in the regular publication of a scorecard ranking the states. Our focus is on the states’ adoption of procedural practices that impact the fairness of states’ laws and regulations for state tax administration and appeal of state tax matters. Why are these issues so important? Although compliance with state tax statutes and regulations is subject to audit scrutiny, the percentage of taxpayers actually audited is small. As a result, our federal and state tax systems are premised, to a great degree, on voluntary compliance. It is a common truth that taxpayers will more fully and willingly comply with a tax system they perceive to be balanced, fair, and effective. Taxpayers operating in a system they perceive as oppressive, unfair, or otherwise biased are less likely to voluntarily comply. The clear message to state tax policymakers is that they must be sensitive to the compliance implications and competitiveness concerns created by poor tax administrative rules and ineffective tax appeal systems.

The COST Scorecard on State Tax Appeals & Procedural Requirements seeks to objectively evaluate state statutes and rules that govern the degree of taxpayer access to an independent appeals process and state treatment of selected procedural elements that impact taxpayers’ perceptions of fairness and efficiency. For these purposes, the essential elements of an effective and independent state tax appeals process are as follows:

- The appeals forum must be truly independent;

Douglas L. Lindholm is President and Executive Director of the Council On State Taxation (COST). Fredrick J. Nicely is Senior Tax Counsel at COST. The authors would like to express their gratitude to Priya D. Nair, recipient of a 2019 COST Research Fellowship, for her dedicated efforts in researching and compiling the survey results used to develop this report. COST Vice President & General Counsel Karl Frieden, Senior Tax Counsel Nikki Dobay, Senior Tax Counsel Pat Reynolds, Policy Director Aziza Farooki, and Tax Counsels Stephanie Do and David Sawyer also contributed to and reviewed this report. Finally, our sincere thanks are extended to the numerous state tax practitioners and state revenue department employees who responded to our questionnaires and ably advised us on the finer points of their respective state laws.
• Taxpayers must not be forced to pay or post a bond prior to an independent hearing and resolution of a dispute;
• The record for further appeals must be established before an independent body; and
• The arbiter at the hearing must be well-versed in the intricacies of state tax laws and concepts.

The procedural elements evaluated in this Scorecard consider whether the state has adopted:

• Even-handed statutes of limitations for refunds and assessments;
• Equalized interest rates on refunds and assessments;
• Due dates for corporate income tax returns at least one month beyond the federal due date, with an automatic extension of the state return due date based on the federal extension;
• Adequate time to file a protest before an independent dispute forum;
• Reasonable and clearly defined procedures for filing amended state income/franchise tax returns following an adjustment to a taxpayer’s federal corporate tax liability; and
• Transparency in the form of published letter rulings (redacted) and administrative/tax tribunal decisions.

Further, the Scorecard identifies certain ineffective, burdensome, or inequitable practices not otherwise reflected in the Scorecard categories. For 2019, the Scorecard includes in such “other issues” instances where states (or their localities): 1) impinge upon taxpayer due process rights by enacting unreasonable retroactive tax legislation; 2) participate in the fundamentally flawed State Reciprocal Program under the federal Bureau of the Fiscal Services’ Treasury Offset Program that satisfies taxpayer “debts” by seizing payments due from federal government agencies without adequate due process protections; 3) fail to provide an effective “safe harbor” (at least 30 days) before personal income tax liability and withholding requirements attach for nonresident employees temporarily traveling in a state for work purposes; 4) contract with third-party auditors, attorneys, or consultants on a contingent-fee basis; 5) apply qui tam (false claims act) actions to state tax disputes, effectively shifting the tax compliance and dispute process from the revenue department to the courts; and 6) impose any other burdensome, inequitable, or ineffective administrative practices or procedures, as noted.

Awards & Demerits

• This Scorecard continues a tradition of recognizing significant improvements in state tax administration. In 2016, the award for “most improved” went to Arkansas, which adopted significant reforms, most significantly eliminating “pay to play” in circuit court by providing taxpayers the option of filing suit for relief from a final assessment or determination without paying the proposed tax, penalties, or interest. Alabama and New Mexico received “Honorable Mentions” for their respective adoption of independent tax tribunals, as did Louisiana and Mississippi for procedural improvements. Several states were recognized for improving transparency surrounding administrative decisions, taxpayer guidance, and rulings. While many states have adopted notable improvements since the 2016 Scorecard, certain states deserve special recognition for adopting multiple changes in accordance with COST’s recommendations for fair and efficient tax administration. Unfortunately, a few states missed opportunities to make bold reforms or, worse, exacerbated already unfair and punitive practices. Below are COST’s 2019 awards and demerits, respectively, for some of these “notable” states.

Most Improved

- California – In 2017, the California legislature took a bold step toward improving the State’s tax administration by adopting and implementing an independent tax tribunal. The Taxpayer Transparency and Fairness Act of 2017 (AB 102) transferred many of the California State Board of Equalization’s duties to two new agencies: (1) the California Department of Tax and Fee Administration; and (2) the Office of Tax Appeals (OTA). The new OTA replaced the hearing function of the State Board of Equalization, whose elected Board had overlapping members who also sat on the three-member Board of the Franchise Tax Board (FTB), the State’s tax agency for personal and corporate income and franchise taxes. The State’s tax transparency has also improved: the new law requires the OTA to publish a written opinion for each case in which it makes a determination. Written opinions will be published on the OTA website and identified as either precedential or nonprecedential. With respect to corporate filing requirements, the FTB in December 2019 issued a notice allowing an automatic seven-month extension to taxpayers filing Forms 100 (Corporation Franchise or Income Tax Return) and 100W (Corporation Franchise or Income Tax Return - Water’s-Edge Filers), for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2019. As a result of these and other changes, California has improved from a mediocre ‘C-’ in the 2016 Scorecard to a more respectable ‘B-’ for 2019.

Honorable Mention

- Texas – Texas improved its overall score for 2019 from a C+ to a B by increasing the number of days to protest a notice of determination from 30 days to 60 days and through a concerted effort to improve transparency in its tax system over several years. In 2015, the Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts issued a letter stating that all Comptroller Decisions would be placed on the state’s STAR research system. Additionally, each Comptroller Decision would “attach and incorporate” the Proposal for Decision issued by the administrative law judge and clearly highlight any changes made to it by the Comptroller. The letter from the Comptroller highlighting the measures the State was taking to increase transparency followed closely on the heels of the promulgation of a rule governing the issuance of private letter rulings and general information letters.

- Kentucky – Like California, Kentucky also made strong strides in improving both its transparency and tax administration system. Effective Oct. 1, 2016, the Kentucky Board of Tax Appeals was reorganized into the Kentucky Claims Commission, consisting of three members appointed by the Governor and approved by the Senate. At least one member must have a background in taxation, and hearings are held de novo. A final order of the commission may be appealed to the Franklin Circuit Court or to the Circuit Court of the county where the aggrieved party resides or conducts his place of business, and bond is not required for appeals from the Commission. The State also made progress in other areas of tax administration. The number of days provided to taxpayers for appealing an assessment was raised from 45 days to 60 days in 2018, and the extended due date for corporate returns was extended from 6 months to 7 months, giving taxpayers one month after the federal extended due date to file Kentucky corporate returns. Also in 2018, Kentucky enacted legislation prohibiting contingency fee contracts for the collection of tax from a taxpayer or examining a taxpayer’s books and records. In 2017, Kentucky issued a revenue procedure indicating it will begin to issue technical advice memoranda, revenue procedures, private letter rulings and general information letters. The State also went through a protracted court battle which ultimately required the Department of Revenue to publish its final rulings in tax administration cases. Opportunities for improvement remain, however. Kentucky fails to provide a reasonable time frame (30 days) before requiring withholding on non-resident employees traveling in the State on business. Its participation in the Treasury Offset Program’s State Reciprocal Program without effective safeguards is also problematic. Finally, although not an issue evaluated in the Scorecard, the State’s adoption of mandatory unitary combined reporting increased the likelihood of protracted litigation for the State and large taxpayers. Kentucky’s grade improved from a C- to a B-.

Demerits

- Minnesota – Tax professionals in Minnesota have raised concerns about a Department of Revenue practice of ignoring certain decisions issued by the Minnesota Tax Court. In 2006, the Minnesota Tax Court issued its decision in Nadler v. Commissioner,\(^7\) a case that dealt with Minnesota’s allocation and apportionment provisions and which ruled in favor of the taxpayer. Subsequently, in 2017, the Department issued a notice\(^8\) advising it would “not administer the income allocation provisions…using the Minnesota Tax Court’s reasoning in Nadler.” Although the Minnesota Tax Court ultimately rejected its reasoning in Nadler in 2019,\(^9\) the Department’s unilateral position in its notice refusing to follow Nadler has raised concerns among practitioners in Minnesota.

- Arkansas – A 2018 decision by the Arkansas Supreme Court raises concerns that the Department of Finance and Administration could raise sovereign immunity as an affirmative defense to taxpayer refund claims because the Arkansas Constitution prohibits the legislature from waiving sovereign immunity for specific purposes.\(^10\) While sovereign immunity has not been asserted as a standard policy position by the current Governor and his administration, it bears noting there is currently nothing to stop future administrations from effectively depriving taxpayers of access to State courts to secure a refund of overpaid taxes. An amendment to the State Constitution is required to remedy the issue.

- Mississippi – In the past several years, a movement emerged in Mississippi permitting the use of contingent fee contracts for tax audits and assessments. In 2017, Mississippi enacted legislation\(^11\) appropriating funds to the Department of Revenue “for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the department’s contingent fee contracts.” Similar language was included in 2018 legislation.\(^12\) COST has long advocated the position that contingent-fee arrangements encourage auditors to be overly aggressive; to interpret State laws to their own advantage rather than in society’s best interest; to “cherry pick” audit targets; and to ignore taxpayer errors that would result in lower assessments. It bears noting, however, that legislation introduced in 2019\(^13\) contained a similar appropriation but was ultimately removed before the legislation was enacted.

- Maryland – On May 18, 2015, the U.S. Supreme Court issued its decision in Comptroller of the Treasury of Maryland v. Wynne, a case involving the dormant Commerce Clause.\(^14\) Prior to the issuance of the Wynne decision, Maryland enacted retroactive legislation on May 15, 2014, providing for a lower interest rate on “Wynne” refunds.\(^15\) A subsequent challenge to the legislation resulted in a Maryland Tax Court decision holding that the legislative provision violated the dormant Commerce Clause “by allowing interest at a lower rate for ‘Wynne’ refunds than other income tax refunds.”\(^16\) The Tax Court decision has been appealed and the issue is currently working its way through the court system. Maryland imposes/pays an inordinately high rate of interest on assessments and refunds (11% for 2019). Interest is designed to account for the time value of money and thus should be levied at or near market rates. The State’s consistent failure to do so is a direct cause of the current litigation over Wynne refunds.
Introduction: About the Scorecard

This Scorecard is the seventh published effort by COST to objectively analyze state treatment of significant procedural and appeal issues that reflect whether states provide fair, efficient, and customer-focused tax administration. This Scorecard expands on and updates the 2001, 2004, 2007, 2010, 2013, and 2016 versions and serves as a tool for policymakers seeking to improve tax administration and the business climate in their states. As with previous versions, this Scorecard is designed to provide objective criteria and research by which to judge state tax administration.

The Scorecard’s standards for the “best” in state tax administration remain fairly consistent, but in the 2019 edition we have expanded our inquiry into several troublesome trends in state taxation, including selective enforcement of withholding requirements and liability for personal income taxes of nonresident traveling employees, and state participation in the fundamentally flawed State Reciprocal Program that allows for seizure of taxpayer moneys to satisfy tax “debts” outside of the normal tax compliance process (discussed in more detail below). We take a more detailed examination of state rules imposed on taxpayers for reporting the impact of a federal audit change on state returns – an issue expected to gain more and more significance as corporate taxpayers grapple with a lack of guidance and continuing uncertainty regarding compliance with the 2017 federal Tax Cuts and Jobs Act. We also take a closer look at some of the traditional Scorecard elements (e.g., tax expertise for independent tribunals, “pay to play” for subsequent appeals, and inequities in the computation of interest) to ensure states are achieving COST’s standards, as well as to better apply these standards consistently across the states. COST will continue to seek ways to expand the scope of the Scorecard to better reflect the breadth of state tax administrative practices.

Objectivity of Scorecard

A note on objectivity: this Scorecard is a counterpart to subjective views on state tax administration which can vary greatly from taxpayer to taxpayer. While the Scorecard evaluates each state’s statutory and regulatory scheme against objective criteria, a subjective approach reflects corporate tax executives’ views of state tax environments.

To properly gauge taxpayer responses to specific state administrative systems, the approach taken by COST (assessing objective criteria) and the subjective approach (based on taxpayers’ experiences) should be viewed in conjunction. Taken separately, each approach may be fairly criticized. Analyzing a set of objective criteria creates a useful benchmark for comparison of administrative practices from state to state but fails to recognize burdensome or unfair administrative practices applied within a sound statutory framework. Conversely, an evaluation of taxpayer responses to subjective questions might mask a deficient statutory framework by recognizing only the goodwill engendered by fair and competent tax administrators.

Grading the States

The first part of the Scorecard evaluates state tax appeals processes by asking two questions: 1) whether the appeals system is truly independent and 2) whether a taxpayer must prepay the disputed tax or assessment prior to an opportunity for an independent hearing. Two other considerations are also paramount, however, in evaluating appeals systems, and are addressed in these two columns of the Scorecard: 3) whether the tribunal’s judges have the requisite expertise in evaluating the complexities of state tax law, and 4) whether the taxpayer has the opportunity for a “hearing of record” (i.e., trial de novo) at an independent tribunal that would form the basis of further appeals. Together, these requirements mirror the essential components of the Model State Administrative Tax Tribunal Act developed by the State and Local Tax Committee of the American Bar Association which has been proposed and adopted, with COST’s support, in a number of states. It is COST’s view that these elements, at a minimum, should be a part of any state’s tax appeals process to achieve fairness, efficiency and a customer-focused tax environment.

Other elements evaluated in this Scorecard consider whether the state has adopted:

- Even-handed statutes of limitations for refunds and assessments;
• Equalized interest rates on refunds and assessments;
• Adequate time to file a protest before an independent dispute forum;
• Due dates for corporate income tax returns at least one month beyond the federal due date with an automatic extension of the state return due date based on the federal extension;
• Reasonable and clearly defined procedures for filing amended state income/franchise tax returns following an adjustment to a taxpayer’s federal corporate tax liability; and
• Transparency in the form of published letter rulings (redacted) and administrative/tax tribunal decisions.

The Scorecard also identifies and evaluates any additional ineffective, burdensome, or inequitable practices not otherwise reflected in the Scorecard categories. For 2019, the Scorecard includes in such “other issues” instances where states (or their localities): 1) impinge upon taxpayer due process rights by enacting unreasonable retroactive tax legislation, interest, or penalties; 2) participate in the fundamentally flawed State Reciprocal Program under the federal Bureau of the Fiscal Services’ Treasury Offset Program that satisfies taxpayer “debts” by seizing payments due from federal government agencies without assuring adequate due process protections; 3) fail to provide an effective “safe harbor” (at least 30 days) before personal income tax liability and withholding requirements attach for nonresident employees temporarily working in the state; 4) contract with third-party auditors or consultants on a contingent-fee basis or use outside counsel to litigate tax cases; 5) apply qui tam (false claims act) actions to state tax disputes, effectively shifting the tax compliance and dispute process from the revenue department to the courts; and 6) impose any other burdensome, inequitable, or ineffective administrative practices or procedures, as noted.

By focusing on objective criteria, the 2019 Scorecard gives states the opportunity to enact corrective legislation as a means of improving tax and business climates. Indeed, since the publication of the 2016 COST Scorecard, many states have taken steps to improve their administrative and appeals processes. Some of the more significant improvements are noted in our “awards” section of the Scorecard, above. It is our hope that publication of this Scorecard will continue to spur policymakers toward additional improvements in the rules and procedures for tax administration and the independent appeal of tax matters in all states.

Scoring System

Point totals for the Scorecard are determined by assessing:

• One point each for failure to meet the following: 1) provide an independent tax tribunal; 2) the independent tribunal hears cases de novo and establishes the record for further appeal; and 3) the independent forum is dedicated to handling tax disputes, and its judges possess the requisite tax expertise.
• One point each for failure to meet the following: 1) no prepayment or bond required to obtain an independent appeals forum hearing and 2) no prepayment or bond required for any level of subsequent appeals.
• Two points if the state fails to apply a statute of limitations generally the same for refunds and assessments, or one point for states that generally apply the same statute of limitations but limit the statute against taxpayers in certain circumstances (e.g., for sales tax refunds or for refunds based on constitutional issues).
• Two points if the state fails to apply equal rates of interest for assessments and refunds, or one point for a) states that apply the same rates of interest but do not calculate interest from comparable dates or b) unreasonable interest on certain types of overpayments (e.g., states that calculate interest on assessments from the date the tax was due should calculate interest on refunds from the date of the overpayment; states should not deny interest if an overpayment is deemed a taxpayer error).
• Two points if the state provides only 30 days or less to appeal an assessment, or one point if the state provides between 45 and 60 days.
• One point each for failure to meet the following: 1) provide an extended corporate return due date at least one month after the federal extended return due date and 2) provide an automatic extension of time to file if a federal extension is granted.
• Up to three points cumulative for failure to meet certain elements for reporting changes resulting from a federal audit. These include whether the state has a definition of “final determination” based on exhaustion of all appeals for a tax year; provides at least 180 days to file a return or report after such final determination; allows prepayments during a pending audit to toll interest charges; and provides an equal time period for assessments and refunds resulting from a federal change. We also evaluate whether a federal change opens the state return for audit items not related to the federal change when the change is beyond the state’s normal statute of limitations. Finally, because many of these elements are addressed in the MTC model addressing partnership audit adjustments and reporting of federal changes, we assess a point for states that have not yet conformed to the MTC Model Language (see explanation below).

- One point each for failure to meet the following: 1) provide and publish binding, written guidance to requesting taxpayers and 2) publicly release tax rulings and decisions of an administrative adjudicatory body (e.g., tax agency hearings division and/or independent tax appeal forum).
- One point for either imposing taxes on a retroactive basis, enacting legislation that reverses a state appellate tax decision retroactively, or a court decision that upholds retroactive tax legislation.
- One point for states that participate in the State Reciprocal Program of the Bureau of Fiscal Services’ Treasury Offset Program without ensuring adequate and effective safeguards are observed (see explanation below).
- One point for states that fail to provide a safe harbor of at least 30 days before liability or withholding requirements for personal income taxes are imposed on nonresident employees who travel in the state for business purposes.

Scores are based on COST’s determination of the relative importance of specific issues to business taxpayers and the presence or absence of mitigating and/or aggravating circumstances. In general, one point is assigned to the “Other Issues” category for each issue found to impact a state’s fair and efficient tax administration.

Summary Results

The Summary Table on Page 8 ranks each state’s statutes and rules in the areas described above. Although much progress has been made since the inaugural COST Scorecard, numerous states are significantly behind the curve in providing fair and efficient tax administration and appeals procedures. Detailed survey data for each state is provided beginning on page 17.

Barometers of State Tax Administration

Fair, Efficient, Independent Appeals

Foremost in good tax administration is a fair and efficient tax appeal system. States with fair and efficient tax appeal systems share four essential elements:

- An independent tax tribunal;
- Tribunal judges with specific training and experience in tax law;
- No prepayment requirement (or bond posting) for taxpayers disputing a tax before receiving an independent, impartial hearing; and
- The record for further appeals is established before an independent body.

A state’s ability to recognize the potential for error or bias in its tax department determinations and provide taxpayers access to an independent appeals tribunal is the most important indicator of the state’s treatment of its tax customers.

Independent Tribunals: The tax court or tribunal must be truly independent. It must not be located within or report, directly or indirectly, to the department of revenue or to any subordinate executive agency. Without independence, the appearance of objectivity is simply not present. That perception, regardless of its accuracy, necessarily detracts from even exemplary personnel and work product of the adjudicative body. Independent tribunals are less likely to be perceived as driven by concerns over revenue collection, upholding departmental policies, or offending departmental decision makers.

Today well over half the states provide an independent appeals process specifically dedicated to hearing tax cases. Although the structure and rules may differ from state to state, taxpayers in these states are able to establish a record for appeal in an independent adjudicative body, before judges well versed in tax matters. The ability to reach an independent tribunal, non-judicial or judicial, without prepayment is another key factor of a fair and efficient appeals process. In addition, many tax dispute systems are designed to allow taxpayers and the state adequate opportunity to meet and discuss settlement opportunities before incurring the hazards and costs of litigation.

States without an independent tax tribunal or similar appeals system limit a taxpayer’s real ability to challenge a state tax assessment. States that do not offer an independent tribunal, and/or force taxpayers to appeal based on a record established at a non-independent proceeding, create a less attractive environment for businesses to operate and are more likely to encourage taxpayers to engage in structural tax planning to minimize potential exposure in the state.

Trained Judges: Most business tax disputes are complicated. Accordingly, tax tribunal judges must be specifically trained as tax attorneys and have significant state tax experience, and the tribunal should be dedicated solely to deciding tax issues. The tribunal (or court) should be structured to accommodate a range of disputes from less complex tax issues, such as those arising from personal income tax matters, to highly complex corporate tax disputes. The tremendous growth and complexity in the body of tax law and the nature of our multi-jurisdictional economy makes this consideration paramount. Judges not trained in tax law are less able to decide complex corporate tax cases on their merit and a perception exists (rightly or wrongly) that the revenue impact of these complex cases too often influences those decision makers as they navigate through the fog of complicated tax statutes, regulations, and precedent. That perception reflects poorly on a state’s business climate and reputation as a fair and competitive place to do business.

No Prepayment Required: Taxpayers should not be required to post bond or pay a disputed tax before an initial hearing. It is unfathomable that taxpayers may still be denied a fair hearing before being deprived of property (i.e., disputed taxes). It is inherently inequitable to force a corporate taxpayer to pay a tax assessment, often based on the untested assertions of a single auditor or audit team, without the benefit of a hearing and the ability to establish a record before an independent tribunal. Free access to an independent hearing without having one’s property confiscated by the law is especially important during difficult state economic climates – once tax money is paid into the system, it is often difficult or impossible to wrest a refund from the state, even after disputes are resolved in the taxpayer’s favor. There are three degrees of state prepayment requirements:

- Full “Pay to Play”: Since Massachusetts and Hawaii years ago eliminated their full “pay-to-play” requirements, we are unaware of any state that requires taxpayers to pay an assessed tax upon receipt of a notice of assessment without an opportunity to contest that assessment before even a non-independent tax forum such as the tax commissioner or an administrative hearing officer. Such systems were the scourge of fair tax administration; their elimination represents a significant step forward in fairness.

- Partial “Pay to Play”: While no state currently requires payment of a disputed tax prior to the administrative appeals process, some states still require payment of the tax or posting of a bond to obtain access to the circuit or district court level in the case of an adverse decision by an independent non-judicial body, or if the taxpayer elects to bypass the non-judicial forum and proceed directly to the circuit or district court level. In those states, taxpayers are at least granted a hearing before a non-judicial tax tribunal, an administrative hearing officer, or the state tax commissioner before such payment is extracted. The perception of unfairness is more acute, of course, in partial pay-to-play states where the initial hearing is before an adjudicatory body that is not independent of the state’s revenue department.

- No “Pay to Play”: In some states, taxpayers do not have to pay a disputed tax until all appeals are exhausted. These systems are perceived to be the fairest — in large part because taxpayers are not held hostage by the jurisdiction in possession of the taxpayers’ funds.

Jeopardy Situations Justify Prepayment: We do not question the necessity of state jeopardy assessment and collection authority. If a state revenue department legitimately feels that a particular tax assessment is in jeopardy based on the facts and circumstances before it, it should certainly be allowed to issue a jeopardy assessment. In those rare circumstances, states need the flexibility to move quickly and should do so as long as due process protections are afforded. Such assessments rightfully protect the state fisc. However, the burden of proving that the assessment is in jeopardy should fall on the state. It would be an extremely unusual circumstance for a state to find it necessary to impose a jeopardy assessment on a publicly traded company.

Basic Procedural Provisions Reflecting Good Tax Administration

In addition to an independent tax tribunal accessible without prepayment, state tax administration should include certain fundamental components necessary to a fair, efficient, and customer-focused state tax system. The following are basic procedural elements that COST has determined should be included in every state’s law:

Even-Handed Statutes of Limitations: Statutes of limitation should apply even-handedly to both assessments and refund claims. Forcing taxpayers to meet a shorter statute of limitations to apply for a refund while granting the tax administrator additional time to issue an assessment is unfair and should not be tolerated in a voluntary tax system. A three-year statute of limitations for assessments should be accompanied by a three-year statute of limitations for refund claims. States with unusual (biased) rules or with unequal statutes of limitations to report federal adjustments are also noted. In addition, claims for refund based on constitutional challenges should not be singled out for discriminatory treatment by shortening the statute of limitations.

Equalized Interest Rates: Interest rates should apply equally to both assessments and refund claims. Failure to equalize interest rates diminishes the value of the taxpayer’s remedy of recovering tax monies to which it is legally entitled. Interest rates are meant to compensate for the lost time-value of money and should apply equally to both parties. The date from which interest begins to run is also important. Because states levy interest from the due date of the return, taxpayers should receive interest from the date of the overpayment of the tax on an original return, although no interest is acceptable if paid within a reasonable time period, say 60 days from the filing of a tax return, to allow state processing of the return and payment. For separate refund claims, interest should be paid from the date of overpayment of the tax – typically the due date of the original return – and not the date of the filing of the refund claim. Interest should also not be denied for refunds based on a taxpayer error, unless the state can prove it was an intentional overpayment. Refunds and liabilities for the same taxpayer should also offset each other in calculating the amount of interest and penalty due.
Protest Periods: The first step in the administrative process in most states is the issuance of an assessment with notification of a right to protest. That protest period should be at least 60 days and preferably 90 days. The American Bar Association’s Model State Administrative Tax Tribunal Act recommends a 90-day protest period. Any protest period shorter than 60 days is unreasonable and could jeopardize a taxpayer’s ability to fully respond to a proposed assessment. A notice period of 60 days or longer is of increasing importance in a global economy where taxpayers must comply with the laws of numerous jurisdictions.

Fortunately, many states have increased the number of days to submit a protest as compared to earlier versions of this Scorecards. Even so, numerous states still offer less than 60 days to file protests. While all of the states now generally offer at least 30 days to protest a tax assessment, COST hopes to see all states grant at least 60 days and preferably 90 days.

Return Due Date and Automatic Extensions: The state’s corporate income tax return due date should be at least one month after the federal tax return due date, or the state’s extended due date should be at least one month after the federal extended due date. Further, the state’s corporate income tax return due date should be automatically extended simply by obtaining a federal extension. By extending state due dates to this point, state tax administrators allow taxpayers to file correct returns based on complete federal return information. Although corporate taxpayers often file a single consolidated federal return, the adjustments necessary to generate the multitude of state tax returns are complex and time-consuming. A minimum of one month beyond the extended federal due date is needed to complete these adjustments. In 2015, the federal government revised the due dates of the original and extended federal return for tax years starting after December 15, 2015 (2016 returns prepared during the 2017 filing season). Corporation returns are now due on the 15th day of the 4th month after year-end (April 15 for calendar-year taxpayers) instead of the 15th day of the 3rd month after year end (March 15 for calendar-year taxpayers). Correspondingly, extended federal returns are now due one month later -- October 15 for calendar-year taxpayers -- which is also the date when most state corporate calendar year tax returns, based on federal numbers, are due. In 2017 Congress enacted substantial federal tax reform through the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act, which greatly complicated state returns that conform, either fully, partially or sporadically, to federal law as a starting point for the state return. As a result, the need to extend state return due dates at least one month beyond the federal due date gained new urgency. As an interim step, COST and the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) requested states, absent corrective legislation, to waive penalties for late filing of state returns Although several states indicated they would consider such a request on case-by-case basis, we offer kudos to the four states who instituted a specific waiver: Kansas, Kentucky, New Jersey and Delaware.

State Reporting Requirements for Federal Tax Changes: Large multistate businesses are often required to file hundreds, if not thousands, of amended returns/reports at the state and local level when a federal tax change is made by the taxpayer and/or the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). Compliance with these reporting requirements is best achieved by state and local governments adopting uniform and even-handed rules for reporting federal tax changes that are consistent regardless of whether a refund or payment results from the change. Filing interim reports of changes (e.g., serial reporting for the same tax year) is not an efficient use of resources for either the state or taxpayers. The following are key elements of a fair and efficient state reporting procedure for federal tax changes:

- Final Determination: All states that require a taxpayer to report federal tax changes, including any applicable local taxes, should link the filing requirement to a “final determination” regarding a taxpayer’s federal income tax liability. The absence of clear, consistent rules creates compliance problems and wrongfully subjects taxpayers to penalties and interest for noncompliance. Moreover, some states require “interim” notification of certain IRS-agreed-to adjustments for a given tax year prior to a final determination of federal tax liability for all issues for that tax year (including any adjustments pending for a related member that is part of a state filing group). This practice needlessly creates additional confusion regarding a taxpayer’s compliance responsibilities and sets up potential traps for the unwary. In defining what constitutes a “final determination,” COST recommends the following definition, endorsed by the MTC and AICPA, as a best practice:

A “final determination” is deemed to occur when any of the following circumstances exist with respect to a federal taxable year:

(a) Except as provided in (b) and (c), if the federal adjustment arises from an IRS audit or other action by the IRS, the final determination date is the first day on which no federal adjustments arising from that audit or other action remain to be finally determined, whether by IRS decision with respect to which all rights of appeal have been waived or exhausted, by agreement, or, if appealed or contested, by a final decision with respect to which all rights of appeal have been waived or exhausted. For agreements required to be signed by the IRS and the taxpayer, the final determination date is the date on which the last party signed the agreement.

(b) For federal adjustments arising from an IRS audit or other action by the IRS, if the taxpayer filed as a member of a [combined/consolidated return/report under State law], the final determination date means the first day on which no related federal adjustments arising from that audit remain to be finally determined, as described in Section (a), for the entire group.

(c) If the federal adjustment results from filing an amended federal return, a federal refund claim, or an administrative adjustment request, or if it is a federal adjustment reported on an amended federal return or other similar report filed pursuant to IRC section 6225 (c), the final determination date means the day on which the amended return, refund claim, administrative adjustment request, or other similar report was filed.19

- Time Period for Reporting and Auditing: Taxpayers need adequate time to report federal tax changes to the states. The necessary adjustments relating to federal tax changes, especially when taking into consideration the states’ decoupling from certain Internal Revenue Code provisions (such as bonus/accelerated depreciation and provisions of the 2017 federal Tax Cuts and Jobs Act), require sufficient time for analysis and accurate reporting. COST recommends a state’s law provide at least 180 days (or six months) to report IRS adjustments to states. States must also be flexible regarding the method of reporting the changes to avoid overly restrictive and inefficient filing requirements. For instance, a federal tax change that does not affect the taxable income reported to the state should have a simplified method to report the close of the federal audit. In addition, the time provided for a state to audit a taxpayer’s adjusted liability (relating to a federal change) should not be greater than a taxpayer’s right to claim a refund (related to the federal change).

- Prepayment Process: Taxpayers should be allowed to submit advanced estimated payments relating to potential federal tax changes without the filing of an amended return. This would permit taxpayers, if they so choose, to make tax payments to a state before the completion of a federal audit and allow the state to receive a tax payment prior to issuance of the final federal determination date. This change would allow taxpayers to reduce interest costs associated with reporting the federal tax change while the rest of the IRS audit process is completed. Currently, many states have statutes or processes that prohibit (either intentionally or unintentionally) these types of estimated payments or do not have a clear refund process if a payment is made in excess of the liability ultimately determined to be owed from a federal adjustment.

- State Statutes of Limitation Waived Only for Federal Tax Changes: When the normal time period for the state to assess additional tax and for a taxpayer to claim a refund has passed, a state should provide that only those items that are the subject of the federal tax change should be open for adjustment (tax due and refund). Absent a mutually agreed to waiver, the statute of limitations should not remain open for any other issues, including items that are related to amended returns or audits in other states.

- Conformity to MTC Model for Reporting Federal Changes, Including Partnerships: The MTC recently issued a revised federal reporting model developed in conjunction with COST, the AICPA, and other groups which addresses changes to how the IRS will audit partnerships.20 Only a limited number of states have attempted to address this new federal partnership audit regime. For partnerships, the model allows a state partnership representative different from the federal representative, addresses tiered partnerships (those owning an interest in another partnership), and allows an election for the partnership to push federal tax adjustments out to its partners that is different from the election a partnership takes at the federal level. COST encourages states to adopt (or improve) the entirety of the crucial improvements made in the MTC model for all taxpayers, which includes the new federal partnership audit procedures.

Transparency in Tax Guidance and Administrative Rulings: As illustrated by the AICPA’s 2003 publication, “Guiding Principles for Tax Law Transparency,” and the recent efforts of the American Bar Association’s Section of Taxation, transparency through publication of tax guidance and rulings is widely recognized as a hallmark of fair and efficient tax administration. Simply put, “secret tax laws” benefit neither the state in its administration of the statutes nor the public in complying with them. While individual taxpayers may perceive advantages in obtaining what they believe is a beneficial ruling, ultimately the broader taxpaying public pays the price for inconsistency in the application of the tax laws. Tax Analysts’ editors have noted that “it is difficult to measure the transparency of a state’s tax system…but to be most effective for purposes of ranking, measures of transparency must be objective. That is, the measures must be easily identified through research and they must be attainable by all states.” In addition to independent tax tribunals, Tax Analysts identifies publication of letter rulings and administrative-level opinions as areas in which states can be ranked (indeed, Tax Analysts performed preliminary research that they kindly shared and we incorporated into our Scorecard).

COST recognizes there are practical limitations on publication of tax guidance. Clearly, for letter rulings and informal administrative hearings to be effective (and utilized), taxpayers’ identities must be redacted. In some cases, not publishing, or providing generalized guidance, for redundant ruling requests or requests for interpretation of unambiguous law may be justified. Further, some states may have a dearth of controversy in certain areas of tax, explaining a lack of published rulings on, for example, corporate income tax issues. Regarding administrative proceedings, a state may choose not to publish informal administrative hearings, but then publish a tax tribunal decision where the record is established. The fundamental question we seek to answer is this: Does the state provide a meaningful and reasonably complete library of letter rulings and administrative decisions, so that the broader taxpaying community may ascertain how the tax law has been applied and thus may be applied under similar facts. This may be one of the more difficult areas to measure, but, as Tax Analysts suggests, is essential nonetheless for a measurement of fairness in tax administration.

Other Significant Procedural Issues

Like the 2016 Scorecard, the 2019 Scorecard includes an “Other Issues” column. In preparing the Scorecard, we surveyed tax practitioners, asking them to identify additional issues that impact fair and efficient tax administration in the state. This Scorecard assigns points (generally one point per issue) to those states identified as having negative practices; the adjustments are identified in the chart following this discussion. Adjustments were made based on, but not limited to, the following practices: independent local revenue departments which create disconformity and complexity; use of contingent-fee auditors or outside paid counsel to litigate tax matters; the application of statutes on a retroactive basis; and the imposition of retroactive penalties and interest. Further, we continue to note whether a state has utilized qui tam (False Claims Act) actions for state tax disputes. Finally, we address two new unsettling trends in state tax administration: 1) selective enforcement and uncertainty surrounding state imposition statutes for liability and withholding requirements for personal income taxes of nonresident employees; and 2) State participation in the fundamentally flawed State Reciprocal Program administered by the federal Bureau of the Fiscal Service under their broader Treasury Offset Program. States should guard against utilizing these and similar unfair and burdensome practices.

Qui Tam (False Claims) Actions in the State Tax Arena: Qui tam or false claims actions are often useful societal tools for ferreting out fraud in complex government/private sector transactions where there is little or no government oversight and where transgressions are clearly and easily delineated. However, applying such “whistleblower” statutes in the state tax arena, where significant “grey” areas exist, undermines the role of the tax administrator in impartially applying state tax laws. Qui tam statutes essentially create a private cause of action that can result in treble damages and award of attorneys’ fees against the transgressor, a cause of action that is typically entirely removed from the normal tax compliance and appeal process. State tax laws, particularly those imposed against large multijurisdictional corporate filing groups, are tremendously complex and often imprecise and uncertain. State revenue departments are specifically equipped to deal with the nuances and complexities of state tax laws. Taking the department out of the process creates uncertainty, often conflicting interpretations of complex tax issues, onerous penalties for non-fraudulent behavior, and perverse incentives to increase the costs of litigation to force settlement. Indeed, the federal government has realized the significant drawbacks to whistleblower actions in the tax arena and forbids their use for income taxes. Instead, the Internal Revenue Service has created a separate whistleblower process within the agency itself. States under pressure to extend their qui tam statutes to state taxes should consider a similar state-level alternative located within the department of revenue.
Retroactive Tax Changes: COST has undertaken to identify recent instances in which state legislatures have enacted retroactive tax legislation, violating taxpayer due process. COST leveraged its research developed in filing amicus briefs on behalf of several taxpayers challenging such retroactive enactments. In all instances cited, it is COST’s opinion that the period of retroactivity far exceeds the “modest” period cited by the U.S. Supreme Court in U.S. v. Carlton, 512 U.S. 26 (1994). While Carlton requires a legislature to have acted with a “legitimate legislative purpose” and to have “acted promptly and established only a modest period of retroactivity,” states have increasingly swept these requirements aside, even waiting until after appellate courts have finally decided a tax dispute before reversing the court’s decision. Such legislation turns the judicial process into results-oriented decision making, undermining taxpayers’ perception of fair and impartial tax appeals in the states. Retroactive tax legislation is one of the most corrosive elements undermining our voluntary state tax compliance system today and encourages taxpayers to withhold payment in fear that the law will not be fairly applied. COST hopes this Scorecard will discourage states from enacting such legislation, or even to consider constitutional prohibitions or other restrictions on such measures.

Tax Liability and Withholding Requirements for Nonresident Employees: States currently impose inconsistent, varying standards and requirements for employees to file personal income tax returns when traveling for business purposes to a nonresident state for temporary periods, and for employers to withhold income tax on employees who travel for business purposes outside of their state of residence for temporary periods. Employees who travel outside of their state of residence for business purposes are subject to onerous administrative burdens because they may be legally required to file an income tax return in every other state into which they travel for work, in half the states even if for only one day. Employers incur extraordinary expenses in their efforts to comply with the states’ widely divergent withholding requirements for employees’ travel to nonresident states for temporary work periods. And in some cases, requirements for employees and employers differ. Because of the difficulty in tracking and complying with these laws, few statutes are enforced, and if so, only on a selective basis against specific taxpayers and their employees. The patchwork of complexity can be significantly reduced, however, if states each adopt a minimum 30-day safe harbor for nonresident employees traveling for business in their state before personal income tax liability and withholding rules attach. Congress has considered such a solution for the last four sessions, but without enactment. COST is encouraging states to enact their own 30-day safe harbor (or more) for nonresident employees and recognizes the states that have done so in this Scorecard.

Due Process Concerns with the State Reciprocal (Offset) Program: While COST supports the ability of taxing jurisdictions to collect delinquent tax amounts, such collections should not occur at the expense of fundamental due process. The Treasury Offset Program’s (TOP) State Reciprocal Program (SRP) allows states to seize federal payments to vendors in satisfaction of state tax “debts” identified solely by a participating state revenue department. Although the program contains several safeguards to ensure that due process protections of taxpayers are not violated, there is no remedy or recourse for taxpayers against states that fail to recognize these safeguards, either through mistake, neglect, or misunderstanding. Once a tax debt is seized, it can take years before the issue is fully resolved and taxpayer’s books and records – both at the revenue department and at taxpayer HQ – are finally corrected. Twelve states currently participate in the SRP, one of five programs administered through the TOP. Unfortunately, the procedural requirements of the SRP are not as robust as other TOP programs, and thus create several fundamental flaws when program safeguards are either inadequate or not observed. Pursuant to the SRP, a state may submit a debt to the TOP, identifying only the amount of the debt and the taxpayer’s EIN. Then, when vendor payments from federal agencies are made to an entity with the same EIN, those payments are intercepted (offset). Prior to submitting an SRP debt to TOP, a state is required to make only a “reasonable attempt” to provide a taxpayer with sixty days written notice of the pending offset and offer an opportunity to inspect and copy records of the agency, dispute the debt, and negotiate repayment terms. In addition, the State must only make a “reasonable effort” to obtain payment of the debt. Neither “reasonable” standard is defined. Contrast that with the TOP’s Income Tax Refund program, which requires sixty days’ notice to be sent certified mail, return receipt requested. As a result of these inadequate safeguards, taxpayers are often not aware of an offset until after it occurs: the notice that an offset has occurred may be sent to the improper address (often a branch location of the entity); and the notice of offset contains no information identifying tax type, tax year, or other reconciling information. Taxpayers (and revenue departments) are then forced to use significant resources to reconcile incorrect payments. We therefore asked states that participate in the SRP several questions regarding their treatment of debts submitted to TOP and whether the state has implemented certain procedural safeguards, including a designated contact person dedicated to resolving SRP issues. Only two states (New Jersey and Virginia) offered written assurance that they have implemented those safeguards and have appointed a point of contact for addressing and resolving SRP issues.
Detailed Survey Data

The table beginning on page 17 provides detailed survey data for each state. At least one practitioner from each state and the tax agency of each state were asked to review and offer corrections to the data and/or related survey questions (below). Where received, responses were integrated into the chart as appropriate to reflect the current status of the law in each state. COST extends its gratitude to those practitioners and tax agency employees who assisted in compiling the data necessary for this study. Note that certain exceptions to the general rules may exist but were not included. Further, we were not always able to reconcile our research and the responses by in-state practitioners with the responses by the tax agency; this demonstrates the lack of clarity surrounding some of the issues. Accordingly, this document is not intended to be used as a comprehensive listing of legal authority for the issues identified, and taxpayers are cautioned to research individual state laws.

Survey Questions for Practitioners and Administrators

1. Does the state have an independent tax appeal forum possessing the following elements: the forum is truly independent; the forum is dedicated to handling tax disputes; the forum’s judges possess requisite tax expertise; and the forum establishes the record for further appeal?
2. Is prepayment or posting of a bond required to obtain an independent appeal forum hearing or to take an appeal (with the exception of reasonable application of jeopardy assessments)?
3. Is the statute of limitations the same for refunds and assessments, regardless of the nature of the issue (e.g., constitutional grounds)?
4. Does the state impose equal rates of interest on assessments (tax due) and refunds (tax overpayments), and does interest run from comparable dates (e.g., date the tax was due for assessments, and date the tax was overpaid for refunds)?
5. Does a taxpayer have at least 60 days to appeal an assessment, and does this period begin from a point approximating notice to the taxpayer (e.g., mailing or delivery, rather than issuance date)?
6. For state tax returns requiring information derived from the taxpayer’s federal corporate income tax return, is the state return due at least 30 days (or one month) after the federal tax return is due (for both the original and extended due dates), and does a federal extension result in an automatic extension of time to file the state return?
7. Does the state define “final determination date” for purposes of reporting a change to federal taxable income (aka RAR adjustments) that occurs after all state and federal appeal rights are exhausted and does not require reporting on an interim basis?
8. Do all taxpayers (including corporations and partnerships) have at least 180 days to report a federal change?
9. Is the scope of review (items that can be adjusted) when reporting federal changes and the time frame (statute of limitations) equal for the taxpayer and the state?
10. Does the state allow taxpayers to make estimated payments (to stop the running of interest) prior to the final determination date with the ability to obtain a refund if the estimated payment exceeded the amount of the federal change ultimately determined?
11. Has the state conformed to the new federal partnership audit rules, e.g. using the MTC partnership model?
12. Does the state issue binding, written guidance to requesting taxpayers (e.g., letter rulings), and does the state publish such (redacted) guidance with appropriate protections for taxpayer confidentiality?
13. Does an administrative adjudicatory body (e.g., tax agency hearings division and/or independent tax appeal forum) that regularly hears tax cases or appeals publicly release its rulings?
14. Has the tax code been changed retroactively to remove a taxpayer right or remedy for years open under the statute of limitations or subject to litigation?
15. Does the state provide a reasonable time frame (30 days) before requiring withholding on non-resident employees travelling in the state on business?
16. Does [your state] participate in the Treasury Offset Program’s State Reciprocal Program? If yes, does your tax agency document and ensure that the following Program procedures are adhered to?

- The “debt” submitted to the TOP must be delinquent, past-due, legally enforceable and final; a deemed underpayment or assessment which is still contestable, under protest, or in litigation with pending appeals, is not a “valid” debt.
- The state revenue agency must make “reasonable efforts” to collect the debt prior to offset, including making a demand for payment, providing the taxpayer/debtor opportunity to dispute the debt, and appropriate notice of intent to offset the debt.
- Notice of intent to offset the debt must be sent to the taxpayer (debtor) 60 days prior to submission of the debt to the Treasury Offset Program.
- Notice of intent to offset the debt should be sent to the taxpayer/debtor’s most current address known to the state tax agency through the taxpayer/debtor’s tax records, not the address of the vendor.
- The individual at the state taxing agency who submits the debt for offset must have delegated certification authority to do so.

Does [your state] specifically identify a person who will serve as the point of contact for addressing and resolving any and all issues related to debts submitted to the State Reciprocal Program? If so, please provide the name and contact information of the contact person:

<td>Yes. Act 2014-146 established the Alabama Tax Tribunal (ATT), an independent agency within the executive branch. At time of appointment, tribunal judges must possess substantial knowledge of the tax law and substantial tax litigation experience. The tribunal’s jurisdiction includes most state taxes and certain county and municipal tax disputes. However, for the 2019 calendar year, sixteen (16) counties and municipalities “opted out” of the Tribunal’s jurisdiction. Ala. Code 1975, § 40-2B-2.</td>
<td>No prepayment or bond is required for appeals to the Alabama Tax Tribunal. Prepayment (or a bond) is required for subsequent or direct appeals to circuit court (this requirement does not apply to taxpayers with a net worth of $250,000 or less). Ala. Code 1975 §§ 40-2B-2 and 40-2A-7(b)(5).</td>
<td>Equal. 3 years for both. Assessment – Ala. Code § 40-2A-7(b)(2). Refund – Ala. Code § 40-2A-7(c)(2).</td>
<td>Equal. Federal under-payment rate. Underpayment – Ala. Code § 40-1-44(a). Overpayment – Ala. Code § 40-1-44(b).</td>

<td>Revenue rulings issued to taxpayers are available with taxpayers’ identifying information redacted, however only a relatively small number are issued each year. Rulings are published on the AL DOR’s website, and when a ruling is revoked by the Commissioner of Revenue, only a summary of the ruling is provided, without access to the original ruling itself.</td>
<td>Many local AL jurisdictions hire private auditing firms rather than using the ADOR to administer local sales, use, rental and lodging taxes. 2014 legislation allows taxpayers to appeal local assessments to the ATT. If the local government opts out of ATT jurisdiction it must engage an experienced non-employee to serve as a hearing officer. Nonresident employees subject to withholding on first day of travel within State. Ala. Admin. Code 810-3-2-.01(3) and 810-3-71-.01(7).</td>

Original: One month after federal – 15th day of 4th month following the close of the tax year. Or, for a corporation whose federal tax return is due on or after this date, the 15th day following the due date of the federal tax return. Ind. Code Ann. § 6-3-4-3.

Automatic Extension: Yes, with federal extension. Id.

IA

No. Tax appeals are heard by an administrative law judge employed by the IA Dept of Inspections and Appeals. The ALI is not required to have tax expertise. The Director of the Iowa Dept of Revenue may retain any case in order to serve as presiding officer of the hearing; however, most cases are referred to and heard by an ALI. After the hearing, the ALI issues a proposed decision subject to further review and modification by the Director. Iowa Admin. Code r. 701-7.17. The Director’s Order becomes the final order and is subject to judicial review in Iowa district court. Iowa Code §17A.19.

No. Prepayment or bond is not required for DOR appeals. Iowa Code § 422.28. For an appeal to District Court, the court may order the petitioner to file a bond only if cause is shown. Iowa Code § 422.29.

Equal. 3 years for both. Assessment – Iowa Code §§ 422.39, 422.25(1)(a), 423.37. Refund – Iowa Code §§ 422.73(1), 423.37, 423.47.

All Iowa taxes that result in a refund accrue interest from the first day of the second calendar month following the date of payment or the date the return was due to be filed, including any extensions, or the date it was actually filed, whichever is latest. – Iowa Code § 421.60(2)(e).

60 days from date of notice. Iowa Code §§ 422.28, 422.41; Iowa Admin. Code r. 701-55.5.

60 days from date of notice. Iowa Code § 422.21. Extended: 6 months. Long Form IA 1120 instructions pg. 2.

Automatic Extension: Yes, Id.
KS

The Board of Tax Appeals does not require prepayment or bond. Kan. Stat. Ann. § 74-2438a. A bond in the amount of 125% of the amount of taxes assessed is required to appeal an order of the BOTA to the court of appeals.

Scope limited to IRS changes and assessment/refund periods both 180 days. Kan. Stat. 79-3230(f).

Unclear if estimated payments can be made.

KS has not conformed to the new MTC model for reporting federal partnership adjustments.

KY

Original: Same as federal – April 15, except returns made on the basis of a fiscal year shall be made by the 15th day of the fourth month following the close of the fiscal year. Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 141.160(1).

Automatic Extension: Yes. Attach a copy of the federal extension to the return when filed.

- Scope limited to IRS changes. Taxpayer must file refund w/180 days of final determination, but assessment is 180 days from date adjustment filed. KY Rev. Stat. §§ 141.210 & 141.235.

Estimated payments can be made but refund ability is unclear. - KY does not conform to the new MTC model for reporting federal partnership adjustments. - TPs must notify DVR of federal audit within 30 days after beginning of the IRS audit. Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 141.210.

The former Kentucky Board of Tax Appeals made its opinions available on its website, and all the new Kentucky Claims Commission determinations are published.

Nonresident employees are subject to liability and withholding on the first day of travel within the State. Kan. Stat. Ann. §§ 79-32,110(b) and 79-3296.

KS participates in the federal Treasury Offset Program’s State Reciprocal Program (SRP) without ensuring effective or adequate safeguards.

The Legislature has passed retroactive legislation several times, including legislation enacted after the issue was decided on the merits by a court. See, e.g., Miller v. Johnson Controls (2010); and King v. Campbell County (2006).
LA State

No prepayment or bond is required to appeal to the BTA, which now includes local tax appeals. While the Department (or local collector) may choose not to issue a formal assessment and instead file suit, bypassing the Board of Tax Appeals, payment is not required unless the Department prevails, or if the taxpayer wishes to remove the suit to the BTA. See, e.g., La. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 47:1431, 1565. In all cases, subsequent appeals require posting of a bond. La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 47:1434.

60 calendar days from the date of the notice to either pay the amount of the assessment or to appeal to the Board of Tax Appeals for a redetermination of the assessment. La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 47:1565.

Original: One month after federal – calendar year returns must be filed on or before the 15th day of May following the close of the calendar year. Fiscal year returns must be filed on or before the 15th day of the fifth month following the close of the fiscal year. La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 47:287.614.

Automatic Extension: No. Taxpayer must apply.

Final determination is not defined in state law and it is not clear reporting is based on exhaustion of all appeals for a tax year. La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 47:287.614(C).

Scope not limited to IRS changes (federal waiver allows DOR to make other changes); however, assessment/refund periods are both 1 year. La Rev. Stat. §§ 47:1580 & 47:1623. No specific authority for estimated payments.

LA has not conformed to the new MTC model for reporting federal partnership adjustments.

ME State

Yes. The Maine Board of Tax Appeals is an independent board within the Dept of Administrative and Financial Services. The Board consists of three members, appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Legislature for three-year terms. Tax expertise is required of Board members, and the Board’s decisions are reviewed de novo by the Superior Court. 36 Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 151-D.

No. Prepayment or bond is not required for appeals to the Board of Tax Appeals or to Superior Court. 36 Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 152.

However, interest on income tax refunds begins from date refund filed, with no interest if paid within 60 days of filing. 36 Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 5279(4).

60 days after receipt of notice of assessment or determination. 36 Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 151(1).

Extended: Same as federal extension. (If a taxpayer is unable to file by the original due date of the return, Maine allows an automatic six-month extension of time to file). 36 Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 5231(1-A).

180 days to report IRS changes. 36 Me. Rev. Stat. § 5227-A(2).

Scope not limited to IRS changes; assessment/refund periods are both 3 years. 36 Me Rev. Stat. § 5278(4). Estimated payments allowed, but refund request if no IRS adjustment is limited to 3 years from payment. 36 Me Rev. Stat. § 5278.

Maine does not conform to MTC model for reporting federal partnership adjustments. 36 M.R.S. § 5195.

Maine Revenue Services will issue non-binding advisory rulings to taxpayers pursuant to Me. Rev. Serv. Rule 110. Justifiable reliance upon an advisory ruling shall be considered in mitigation of any penalty sought to be assessed. Advisory rulings are not published, but they may be obtained in redacted form through a FOIA request.

Maine Board of Tax Appeals at its discretion publicly releases redacted rulings on its website. As a matter of policy, it does not publicly release rulings that have been appealed, unless affirmed on appeal.

ME participates in the federal Treasury Offset Program's State Reciprocal Program without ensuring effective or adequate safeguards for taxpayers. Local jurisdictions engage outside counsel to prosecute tax cases. Local taxing authorities are authorized to hire and pay contract auditors on a contingent fee basis.

Prepayment or bond requirement?

Partial. Taxpayers are not required to prepay the amount of tax in dispute for appeals at the Appellate Tax Board. However, the stay on collection only applies to subsequent appeals (to the Appeals Court or the Supreme Judicial Court) if the taxpayer prevailed at the Appellate Tax Board. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 62C, Sec. 32(e).

Equal.

Unequal.

Original. Same as federal — on or before 15th day of 4th month following close of taxable year. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 62C, § 11; Form 355 instructions.

Extended.

Automatic Extension:

Yes. See Instructions, Form 355-7004, Corporate Extension Payment Worksheet.

Final determination is not defined in state law and not clear reporting is based on exhaustion of all appeals for a tax year. Md. Code Ann. Tax-Gen § 13-409.

Unclear if scope limited to IRS changes; however, assessment/refund period are both 1 year. MD Reg. Code § 03-04.03.06(B)(3) & MD Tax-Gen. §13-1101(c). No specific authority for estimated payments.

MD has not conformed to the new MTC model for reporting federal partnership adjustments.

The MD Comptroller has not historically issued binding letter rulings, instead issuing (but not publishing) nonbinding letter rulings. However, 2016 S.B. 843 requires the Comptroller to develop regulations for issuing private letter rulings, and the Comptroller’s website has a placeholder for publishing those letter rulings.

A small number of Maryland Tax Court decisions are available online for tax years 1999-2019 (e.g., 3 decisions each for 2011 and 2012, 1 for 2013, 4 for 2014, 12 for 2015, 4 for 2016, 8 for 2017, 5 for 2018, and 4 for 2019).

The MD legislature passed retroactive legislation to reduce interest rates for taxpayer refund claims arising from the U.S. Supreme Court’s decision in Comptroller of the Treasury v. Wynne. See Budget Reconciliation and Financing Act of 2014.

Nonresident employees are subject to liability and withholding on first day of travel within the state. Md. Code Ann. § 10-906; Md. Code Ann. § 10-907.

MD participates in the federal Treasury Offset Program’s State Reciprocal Program without ensuring effective or adequate safeguards.

The MD legislature has the power to set up its own appeals system, which is different from the federal system. The MD Comptroller is responsible for issuing letter rulings, which are nonbinding in nature. The MD Tax Court reviews these rulings and makes a decision. If the taxpayer is not satisfied with the decision, they may appeal to the Maryland Court of Appeals.

MA

Yes. The Appellate Tax Board is in the executive office of administration and finance. The Board is dedicated to handling tax disputes. Members are appointed by the Gov. with advice and consent of executive council. Tax experience is not required by statute, but customary for appointees to be well-versed in either MA property tax principles or in other areas of MA tax law. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. SBA § 1. Appeals can be made to the Appeals Board, but the record is established at the Board. Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. SBA § 13.

Prepayment or bond is required for appeals to the Tax Court. Md. Code Ann., Tax-Gen. § 13-510. However, when an order of the Tax Court is subject to judicial review, that order is enforceable unless the reviewing court grants a stay upon such condition, security or bond as it deems proper. Md. Code Ann., Tax-Gen. § 13-532(b).

Rates of interest on assessments (tax due) and refunds (tax overpayments) are the same. Annual rate - greater of 11% (for 2019) or average prime rate plus 3%. Md. Code Ann., Tax – Gen. § 13-604(b).

The Comptroller has taken the position that interest will not be paid on a refund claim if based on "an error or mistake of the claimant not attributable to the State." Administrative Release No. 14, revised Aug. 2012.

Original: Same as federal – on or before the April 15 that follows that taxable year; or if income tax is computed for a fiscal year, on or before the 15th day of the 4th month after the end of that tax year. Md. Code Ann., Tax – Gen. § 10-821(a).

Automatic Extension: No. Taxpayer must apply using Form 500E id.

Reporting Federal corporate tax changes

Final determination is not defined in state law and not clear reporting is based on exhaustion of all appeals for a tax year. Md. Code Ann. Tax-Gen § 13-409.

The MA DOR publishes redacted letter rulings to its website, along with other guidance (Regulations, Technical Information Releases, Directives and Administrative Procedures). A taxpayer may rely on a Letter Ruling issued to that taxpayer unless and until the Letter Ruling is revoked, modified, or superseded. 830 CMR 62C.3.1(e).

Decisions before the DOR’s Office of Appeals are not published. Appellate Tax Board rulings are published for formal appeals when requested by the parties.

<td>The WA DOR issues binding written guidance. The DOR does not publish its Tax Rulings (considered confidential tax information). Board of Tax Appeals decisions are published to its website. The DOR’s Administrative Review and Hearings Division applies certain criteria in deciding whether to publish opinions (e.g., addresses a novel area of law, a novel application of facts, or overrules a previous position). Approximately one-quarter of such decisions are currently being published.</td>
<td>The Legislature has repeatedly passed retroactive legislation expressly intended to reverse state high court decisions. See Dot Foods v. Dept’T of Revenue (2016) and In re Estate of Hambleton v. Washington (2014). The DOR asserts it is not bound by: 1) informal decisions of BTA for other taxpayers or the same taxpayer for different tax years; 2) letter rulings for other taxpayers; 3) unpublished Dept determinations for other taxpayers; 3) industry guidelines posted on its website; and 4) regulations.</td>

<td>Yes. The West Virginia Office of Tax Appeals (OTA) hears appeals of decisions or orders of the Tax Commissioner. W.Va. Code § 11-10A-8. The OTA is a “quasi-judicial” agency. However, for administrative purposes, the OTA is located in the Department of Tax and Revenue. W.Va. Code § 11-10A-3. Tax expertise is required. W.Va. Code §§ 11-10A-6; 11-10A-7.</td>
<td>Prepayment or bond is not required for appeals to the Office of Tax Appeals (OTA). W.Va. Code Sec. 11-10A-18. However, for subsequent appeal of OTA decisions to the circuit court, “within ninety days after the petition for appeal is filed, or sooner if ordered by the circuit court, the petitioner shall file with the clerk of the circuit court a cash bond or a corporate surety bond approved by the clerk.” W.Va. Code Sec. 11-10A-19.</td>
<td>Equal. 3 years for both. Assessment – W. Va. Code § 11-10-15(a). Refund – W. Va. Code § 11-10-14[(b)(1)].</td>
<td>Unequal. Prime rate plus three percentage points as annually fixed by Tax Commissioner. W. Va. Code § 11-10-17(c). Underpayment – Additional 1.5% over base rate. W. Va. Code § 11-10-17(a). Overpayment – W. Va. Code §§ 11-10-17(a), 11-10-17(d); Interest on overpayments runs from date of filing of claim. No interest paid if refund issued within 6 months of claim.</td>
<td>60 days after service. W. Va. Code § 11-10-8(a).</td>
<td>Final determination is defined and is based on exhaustion of all appeals for a tax year. W.Va. Code Ann. §§ 11-21A-1 &amp; 11-24-20. 90 days to report IRS changes. W.Va. Code § 11-24-20. Unclear if scope limited to IRS changes, assessment period is 90 days after filing, with unclear refund period. W.V Code §11-10-15(c). No clear guidance on estimated payments.</td>
<td>WV adopted legislation that generally comports with the MTC model for reporting federal partnership adjustments. SB 499 (2019).</td>
<td>The Tax Commissioner can issue technical assistance advisories, upon request, at his or her discretion. W. Va. Code §11-10-5r. The technical assistance advisories are available on the WV State Tax Department’s website and are modified or redacted to not disclose the taxpayer’s identity. However, only 4 have been published since 2006: 1 in 2010, 2011, 2013, and 2019, respectively.</td>
<td>When a nonresident employee works only a short period of time within the State and it is reasonably expected that the total wages of such non-resident employee for services rendered in WV will not exceed his personal exemption, employers need not withhold until the wages exceed his personal exemption. W. Va. Code St. R. § 110-21-71.4.2.4. WV participates in the federal Treasury Offset Program’s State Reciprocal Program (SRP) without ensuring effective or adequate safeguards.</td>

Note: The table above provides a summary of the key provisions and requirements for tax disputes in Wisconsin (WI) and West Virginia (WV). For detailed information, refer to the respective state laws and regulations. The table includes provisions such as appeal forums, prepayment or bond requirements, interest rates, and deadlines for protesting tax assessments. It also highlights the role of quasi-judicial agencies and technical assistance advisories in resolving disputes. The table further notes other fairness issues related to the tax laws and tax dispute resolution processes in both states.
